Provisions of the New Homestead

[Special to the Cincinnati Gazette of to-day.] Some of the arguments used in the Senate y Butler or his friends in the Simmons matter are leaking out. He has been very busy himself attempting to ascertain the vote of the Senate, but as yet without success. There is good authority for the statement that the New England Senators were nearly all opposed to Simmons, and that most of those on both sides outside of New England who have prominent standing in the body were also against him. There is also excellent authority for saying that word was circulated by Butler's work-ers among the Democratic Senators, that they ought to vote to confirm Simmons, because if Butler succeded it would certainly divide the Republican party in Massachuetts. The inflationists were worked upon by repesenting Eew England as for contraction, and those most urgent to defeat them in the Senate as those appealing for the rejection of Simmons. The best men on the Republican side, with very few exceptions, and nearly all the better class of Democrats, voted

The Centennial Celebration Bill still hangs in the Senate, and may yet occupy the at-tention of that body a day or two, and with-al the result is problematical. The spirit of penuriousness which pervades this Congress may be the cause of the ultimate defeat of he whole Centennial affair. Senator West has introduced a bill giving to the Court of Claims sole jurisdiction of all claims of loyal citizens for damages to proprty by the war, and providing persons shall be considered loval and entitled to claims under the laws for in-demnification for such losses. The bill abolishes the Southern Claims Commission and provides that all claims of the sort pending before the Commission or any Govern-ment officer, shall be taken before the Court of Claims. The Court must report to Congress their action on all cases for the action of the legislative body. Either party may appeal for a final review to the Supreme Court of the United States, in cases involving more than $3,000. The Court of Claims is also authorized to appoint a a Commissioner in each United States Judicial District, and the Commissioners are to be clothed with power to summon witness and take testimony in cases arising in their jurisdiction.

[Special to the Cincinnati Enquirer of to-day.] Mr. Townsend, Pennsylvania, succeeded in passing his homestead bill to-day. The measure virtually abrogates the old pre-emption land system, and reserves the public domain for actual settlers. It is true that the President still has the power of offering lands at public sale, but it is not likely that this power will be exercised. Two important amendments were adopted—one, offered by Mr. Beck, which excludes the iron-clad oath as a test, and leaves the public domain open to Southern men; another, offered by Judge Holman, which declares that the public land heretofore granted to railroad porations, or to States for their use and benefit, which have been forfeited for failure to comply with the conditions of the grant shall be subject to the provisions of this home-stead bill. It is stated that there are many millions of acres of choice land from which settlers are now excluded, falling under this description. Among others, the lands of the lands of the old St. Croix and Bayfield grant Since his victory over Boutwell, the two Ioars and the Beacon-street Radicals in the profits secured. It is drawing sufficiently near the spring to know something of the incoming styles. No more ridingotes; they had a long youth as the polonaise, and a prolonged middle-aged existence as the ridingote. Skirts are very universally puffed—either puffed in front or flounced behind, or ruffied in front and puffed in the root. and puffed in the rear. These puffs are graduated in width—placed perpendicularly upon the lining, and separated with bands of the material on which beaded embroidery is done or passementeric ornaments are sewed at intervals. They are stylish and most magnificent for catching the most magnificent for catching the dirt and refusing to part with it. A black gros grain recently imported had seven puffs on his front widths separaever offered in this city, are ted by bands two inches wide. The loveliest now opening at embroidery in silk and jet ran up these di-viding stripes; the back was made of flounces, a deep one with the embroidered bands for heading, a narrow one and another band so on up to the hips. Two triangular pieces, heavily embroidered, turned back from the sides and met under the long square coat-tails of the basque. The seam in the middle of the back is left open from the waist down.

The square sides are embroidered, and in the whole waist is embroidered and beaded, worn over a vest and tie of white silk and valenciennes. And oh! another sweet thing, pantalettes You can show 'em in the spring. They must be wide, elaborately trimmed with lace frills and embroidery and reach the ankle. They and emoroidery and reach the ankle. They are touching, and when worn with thin and queer foot handles very becoming. To he sure the irreverent youth who enjoyed the privilege of taking me to the Charity ball beheld these pantalettes for the first time heneath the raised train of a belle. I was too late to interfere. He rushed forward, and in the most poyet plant and end environ. the most mysterious and anxious manner whispered her she was "losing em off." No words can describe the look she rewarded him with. Their funds to erect another place of worship. Their pastor was accordingly sent out through the Lackawaxen valley to state their case and solicit subscriptions. He succeeded well and went to New York to ask the aid of certain charitable parties there. He raised about $500$. His last day in the city he was walking along Broadway, when a man came up to him and addressed him, angrily, with—"See here, I must have the amount of that bill to-day, I can't wait any longer."

"The bill for that hardware. It's been standing for nearly two years."

The reverend gentleman had now recovered himself, and saw the man had made a mistake. He had taken him for another person. The minister then informed the irate creditor that he was not the man that owed the bill; that he was Rev. Mr.—, of Great Bend, Pennsylvania, and was out raising money in aid of his church, which had been burned down. The man was very sorry, and apologized profoundly, and bade the preacher good-day. In a few minutes afterward a tap on the shoulder of the latter caused him to look up, and there was the ward a tap on the shoulder of the latter caused him to look up, and there was the mistaken creditor again. He said that in the confusion of their first meeting, when he was made aware of the identity of the reverend gentleman it had not occurred to him that he had once the pleasure of bearing him presch harden. it had not occurred to him that he had once the pleasure of hearing him preach, having occasion to remain in Great Bend over Sunday, and now recognized him. The stranger also said he would like to do a little for the church in its adversity. He was on his way to collect a bill of a man amounting to eighty-four dollars, and if the preacher would go with him he should have half the amount. To this the shepherd readily consented. The two walked a long way and turned into a small street. They went up into the fourth story of a building and into a room where a man was writing at a desk. "Halloo!" he said, "you have come after that money, have said, "you have come after that money, have you? Let's see, $84 wasn't it?" Yes, it was you? Let's see, $84 wasn't it?" Yes, it was $84. The gentleman at the desk handed the collector a $100 bill. He could not change it, but turned to the minister and said, "Here, you're to have half of this, can you give this gentleman $16?" With a beaming smile the preacher handed the desired sum into the hands of the Philistines. The gentleman the two had called on now The gentleman the two had called on now cooly informed him that he must disgorge all the money he had about him, or he would never go out there alive. In vain the preachnever go out there alive. In vain the preacher protested. He was compelled to hand every cent he had collected, and was then kicked down stairs. He took the first train for home, where his anxious and delighted flock awaited him—delighted because he had kept them informed as to his success. But he had nothing for them but the above sad story. He did not know the name of the street he was taken to, nor in what part of the city it was located. The building of the church had progressed rapidly, but work stopped at once. And now it is said the contractor is moving to having the property sold tractor is moving to having the property sold to obtain the pay due him.

Whisky Beat Him.

There is scarcely a community or neighborhood from Maine to California where this saying is not used almost every day in the year, and altogether too truly. A subject of this kind is to be found in almost every town. The merchant has failed, and whisky has done it. The lawyer, with brilliant stalents and large business, has fallen below the range of respectability and confidence. Whisky was the sole cause. The politician, with bright prospects before him, has played out, and the account is charged to whisky. The judge, of age and respectability, is the subject of private and neighborhood talk. His enemies point with derision, and his friends hang their heads in shame, and whisky has done it. The kind-hearted whisky has done it. The kind-hearted neighbor and hard-working man has become a pest in society and trouble in his family. Whisky beat him. It will beat any man living, and that is just what it is made for.

WHETHER it be the result of accident or design, the flank movement of the women upon the saloons is likely to be more effecsaid. In as much as ye have done it unto as it would be expected, and nobody is greatly disconcerted by what he is prepared to encounter. But this shrewd turning the flank of the liquor line, and taking it in the rear, where its legal breastwork not only does not protect it but obstructs its retreat, is a sort of tactics that would beat older soldiers than the "Baxter Bullies." It is no part of the "prayer cure," though, for it can be applied just as well without the patent "Lewis improvement" of hymns and prayers and personal solicitations, as with it. Italian Railroads.

A correspondent writing from Italy, says on the subject of railroad: Her railroads are magnificent structures, the waiting rooms elegantly frescoed, and the seats of the finest silk velvet. When the train stops for dinner, they give you an hour to eat your meal. The railroad beds are the smoothest I have ever ridden over; the embankments are all built of solid masony of the most substantial nature, and the bridges are of massive stone. If the bridges, embankments and road bed of the New York Central Railroad were built like those of the High Italy railroads. that road, with its immense revenues, could not pay a half per cent. divided on the cost of its construction. The expense of running railroads in Italy is enormous. Every ton of coal is bought in England, costing $10 per ton, and transported at an enormous cost to the company. The system is admirable. Of course, I do not like the carriages; but in every other respect they excel us Americans. It is impossible for a traveler to get into the wrong train or car, even if he does not speak French or Italian. Every man connected with a railroad wears a uniform, and the lifts his hat to you as he examines vour ticket.

Money.

[Communication in the Philadelphia Record.] MR. EDITOR: The belief that currency traordinary delusion for any one to labor under in this age of the world and in this country. Not only can currency be too abundant, but it repeatedly has been too abundant. The continental money was too abundant, and finally became of no value, except as curiosities for scrap books. Not many years ago bank notes were so abundant that flour was imported from Europe to New York, because it cost less to do so than to bring it from our western states. Some board of trade in Chicago thinks that there is not enough irredeemable paper money in circulation. Would this board like to see a complete stop put to the export of flour and grain from Illinois? They talk, write and petition as if they would.

The man who asserts that there is not enough currency in existence pretends to know two things which no mortal man can know: First, that there is a certain fixed amount of currency necessary for transacting the business of the country; and secondly, that he knows what that amount is. Some of the western newspapers cry out that the west has not enough currency. If this is so, let the people of the west earn more. We might suppose, from their lansuppose, from their guage, that they expected the government to issue a fresh flood of greenbacks and present a five-dollar note or a ten-dollar note to every man, woman and child in these wes-tern states. Government was not established as a benevolent institution, upon the principle of our soup societies.

The enormous amount of luxuries imported into this country since the late civil war are at the bottom of our financial troubles. Millions of dollars are sent to France every year to buy ribbons to hang down between the shoulderblades of our young women, and the young women are very much surprised that young men do not marry as early as they did twenty years ago.

Comfort for the Boston Committee. [Chicago Tribune.]

Mr. Forbes and his friends deserved pre-cisely what they received. What did they protest against? Did they say to the President that the Republican party of Massachus-setts were disgnsted with the general abuses of the civil service; disgusted with the mode in which important offices were filled; disin which important offices were filled; disgusted with the Executive weakness in consenting to remove competent men at the bidding of any Senator or Representative, and the appointment of any personal retainer of such Senator or Representative? Did they tell him that the civil service was rotten and corrupt from Maine to Texas and Oregon? Did they tell him that Simmons's case was merely another illustration of the universely rule upon which Executive petronage was rule upon which Executive patronage was distributed in every State in the Union? They said nothing of the kind, They said, in substance if not in words, that they admired the President and his way of doing things, and that the "well-earned fame" he had associated through the appointment of things, and that the "well-earned fame" he had asquired through the appointment of Murphy, Casey, Kramer, "Sile" Hudson, et al., should not now be tarnished by appointing a low fellow like Simmons! Mr. Forbes and his colleagues will receive no sympathy from any quarter, for they stand upon ground no better than Butler's,

It was thought that a short period in jail would refresh his memory and awake a disposition in him for frankness, the grand jury, under the incisive leadership of foreman Smith, having determined to make short work of dealing with prevaricating witnesses. Walls, after a few hours in the bastile, found that his memory was much improved, and on giving the desired information to the grand jury was released

Crowned With the Tempest,

The atmospherial phenomenon of a thunder storm in March was let loose upon the city and surrounding country last night. For over an hour the rain came down in great sheets of water flooding the streets, washing away building materials, and doing a good deal of damage. The accompaniments of vivid flashes of lightning and rumbling thunder were as remarkable as the great fall of water. Finally the rain merged into hail and in a few moments the ground was covered with large stones. The streams are all on a high, as a result of the storm. The fire in a passenger engine on the C. H. & I. road was extinguished by the beating of the rain through the smoke stack. The fire alarm bells were rung several times by the effects of the electricity. Much damage is reported in the East and North East parts of the city. The residence of John Laughlin corner of Ohio and East streets, was flooded to the depth of one foot.

Amusements.

The storm last evening prevented many who wished to attend the performance of Haverly's Minstrels at the Academy of Music from so doing. Nevertheless there was a good audience present to witness the superb entertainment offered. The program was entirely changed from that of the previous evening-a good test of the first-class capabilities of the troupe. In the first part Fayette Welch and George Wilson had to respond to double encores to their songs of 'Norah O'Milligan' and "Don't Grieve After Me." For the encores they gave old plantation songs which were quite "taking." Wilson is one of the best Ethiopian comedians that have ever appeared in this city. Morris as "The Black Dutchman" said many laughable things. Bernardo's version of "Nillson's Carnival" was good, as also were the songs and dances of Canfield and Booker and Goss of the Fourth Ward Temperance Union, to and Fox. The mirth-provoking sketch of the "Employment Office" concluded a very evening next, the churches composing this enjoyable program. Ralston's House and Grave. To the Editor of The Evening News.

The Journal says: the old brick house, on Maryland street, west of Tennessee, the former residence of Alex Ralston, and one of the oldest houses remaining in the city, "was the homestead of George Norwood, one of the pioneers of the country." We suspect that will be news to Mr. Norwood, whose "homestead," so long as he held one in the central part of the city, was the old orick on the South West corner of Market and Illinois streets, nearly opposite his wagon shop. "Newt" Norwood as he was called, a son of the pioneer lived in the Ralstonsometimes called the "Tichenor" house and died there, but that is as near as it ever came to being the Norwood homestead. By the way, we are told that Mr. Norwood knows where the grave of Ralston is. If he does, he is the only man we know of that does, and he ought to fix the place speedily that some memorial of the deceased's connection with the city may be erected there, or the bones be taken to Crown Hill, as the Journal suggested and fitly marked there. Journal suggested and fitty marked there.

It is not certain, though it is by no means improbable that the "Ralston" is the oldest brick house in the city next to the Johnson, on Market street, just demolished. The old Ferry house partly reconstructed after a fire twenty years ago, on West Washington street near the mill race, and the Scudder house on Washer and Tennessee. Market and Tennessee, may be as old, but we don't believe they are. A two story we don't believe they are. At wo story house on East Washington, north side, between Delaware and the first alley west, has been changed since its youthful days, but we believe is substantially the same old structure, and if it is, it is about as old as any of them.

E. H. Lamme excited the ire of some of his temperance friends this morning by ejaculating, "I am as good a temperance man as Ritter, but I will do anything for money." Lamme must be getting reckless in his greed

The proverbial glibness of a woman's tongue was illustrated in the city court this morning, a female witness being so desirous of testifying that she could not await her turn, but kept "chipping in" while the other testimony was being heard.

Albert Peck, one of the Virginia avenue Hoodlums raised a disturbance, last evening and afterwards desired that two or three policemen might come to arrest him and get "warmed," he particularly wanted to be waited on by "that red headed cop." Officer Mc-Kinney strayed up this morning and found no particular trouble in bouncing him up to the city court where he will be tried to-morrow.

PRAYER CRUSADE.

ent Organization Effected Officers Elected—Other Proceedings.

If the anti-temperance men have been consoling themselves with the probability that the Ladies' Movement was but an effervescense of enthusiasm, soon to tide over and subside, an attendence upon yesterday afternoon at Roberts Park would be convincing to the contrary. It was a large meeting, a deeply earnest and thoughtful meeting, perfectly harmonious and with sufficient enthusiasm to closely knit the participators undeniably together. The unsympathising spectator could not but be deeply impressed, especially when, at the announcement that one saloonist had abandoned the contest for an application, the ladies broke out in that eloquent strain, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," following it with prayers so earnest, so supplicating, so thoroughly devotional, that it is impossible to believe they will fail in their mission.

Mrs. Dr. Bayliss presided at the opening, and after a half hour of devotional exercises, she announced the withdrawal of Patrick Gorman, 239 West Washington, and of his premises to sell whisky no longer. Mrs. Bartlett gave a feeling description of herexperience in soliciting signatures, and then Mrs. Dr. Harvey, chairman of the committee, submitted the following as a basis for permanent organization, which was adopted:

Article 1. This Association shall be called the "Woman's Christian Town he "Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

Article 2. The officers of the Association shall consist of a President, Secretary and Vice Presidents, these latter to be selected from Christian Women, one from each ward of the city, also Corresponding Secretary and our power, to suppress intemperance. We do for this object hereby pledge ourselves to God and each other. ly Christian work.

Article 5. We will continue this work until God shall crown our efforts with success.

Article 6. We will, to accomplish this, avail ourselves of the power placed in our hands, as law-abiding citizens.

The second article first read to consist of a Vice President from each church of the city, but was afterwards made to read, on motion of Miss Auretta Hoyt, "a christian woman from each ward," under the idea that a representative from every church would make an unwieldy body. Mrs. Bayliss declined, because she was worn out with the Benevolent Society work and had not the strength to continue. The name of Mrs. Dr Harvey was subisituted, and the officers unanimously elected.

One forcible remark by Mr. Ritter was interpreted to mean that not a petition had been granted but on which there had been fraud of some kind, and this harrassed the opposition considerably. The Board, at the suggestion of Mr. Taylor announced that they would not decide upon the question at issue until 2 p. m., and until that time the Court arose. After Mr. Howland had retired, and after it was supposed an adjournment had been made, Mr. Mattler forced a hearing of his side of the case over again, he advocating the liquor interest, and Rumford and James son were detained quite a while in examin ation of the authorities produced-a proced ure very much to the disgust of the opposi tion:-they claiming no argument should be made unless before a full bench.
